THIS CLASS MEETS: MON/WED 9-11AM

OBJECTIVES

- To introduce students from abroad, and in the main students from the United States, to the geographical diversity of the European subcontinent.
- To raise in them an awareness of the key milestones involved in the process of European construction and of its present-day situation.
- To provide information concerning the policies implemented by the European Union, with specific emphasis on those of a regional character.
- To enable students to become aware of the key role of Europe within the process of globalization (world economy, globalization of transport and communications...).

METHODOLOGY

Participation in this Course implies essentially the active role of students who will be encouraged to think reflectively and to contribute to debates, following on from the exploration of the fundamental aspects of syllabus content, backed-up both audiovisually and by means of selected readings.
