

COURSE NAME:
APPLIED ANTHROPOLOGY – MAN IN PROGRESS

UFV CODE: 1151 ECTS: 4.5

TYPE OF COURSE: LC, 2C

INTERNATIONAL CODE: HUM1151 YEAR: 2

REQUIREMENTS: HUM1150

OBJECTIVES: To understand the scope of the fundamental anthropological question in the light of philosophical and theological anthropology. To understand the origin and structure of the question regarding nature and human existence in Western society through the ages: Classical, Medieval, Modern and Contemporary. To understand that the fundamental philosophical questions about God, man and the world articulate all cultural manifestation

COURSE DESCRIPTION: In the light of great works of universal literature, the course examines the great questions about man, in response to which man, everyman, influences the destiny of his personal existence. From Greek tragedies to existentialists of the 20th Century, considering authors such as Dante, William Shakespeare, Cervantes etc. The authors and works will change according to the criteria set by the course leader and the group's own interest

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Course notes, literary works and screenplays

METHODOLOGY: Discussion of selected texts, film material, lectures and exercises in reasoning

PROFESSOR: Angel Sánchez-Palencia Martí LANGUAGE: Spanish